

I am opposed to the docket. As an active licensed radio amateur I see no benefit to the public or business to apply a layer of noise to spectrum already used by FCC licensed services which will impose a hardship their use legal and useful thereof. With homeland security an issue every day the amateur radio service exists as the last fail-safe communications service in the country. There is no need to make it harder to be used for the benefit of public safety. Sincerely, Dwight Hill